PlayLabs 2018 runs October 22–28 at the Playwrights’ Center

MINNEAPOLIS (October 5, 2018) — Performances for the Playwrights’ Center’s annual PlayLabs new play festival runs Monday, October 22, through Sunday, October 28, 2018. The featured playwrights are Andrea Stolowitz (“The Berlin Diaries”), Stacey Rose (“Legacy Land”) and Ariel Stess (“KARA & EMMA & BARBARA & MIRANDA”), all Core Writers at the Center. The festival also includes a Playwriting Fellows Showcase. Tickets are free and can be reserved at pwcenter.org/playlabs.

For more than 30 years, the Playwrights’ Center’s PlayLabs festival has been one of the nation’s most comprehensive play development programs. Playwrights receive 30 hours of workshop time with a team of collaborators (including designers) and two public readings—with time for rewrites in between. More than 65% of the plays featured in PlayLabs over the past decade have gone on to production, and the festival has become a must-attend event for theater leaders and fans both locally and from around the country.

“These workshops, especially when paired with two readings, open up space for playwrights to do real, extensive work and experimentation with their scripts,” says Jeremy B. Cohen, producing artistic director of the Playwrights’ Center. “We are grateful to be able to support Stacey, Ariel and Andrea in this exploration and provide the opportunity to let their stories live so boldly on stage.”

All PlayLabs events are free and open to the public, and take place at the Playwrights’ Center, 2301 E. Franklin Avenue in Minneapolis. For tickets, see pwcenter.org/playlabs or contact the Playwrights’ Center at (612) 332-7481 or info@pwcenter.org. Here’s the schedule for PlayLabs 2018:

“The Berlin Diaries” by Andrea Stolowitz
Monday, October 22, and Friday, October 26, at 7 p.m.

In 2006, playwright Andrea Stolowitz received a copy of her great-grandfather’s 1939 diary from the archivist at the US Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM). It sat on her shelf. In 2015, Andrea Stolowitz received a DAAD fellowship to spend a year in Berlin using the diary as the basis for a new play. The parallel lives of Max Cohnreich and Andrea Stolowitz create a nested detective narrative about the search for home and family which operates at the border of reality and memory and the intersection of national history and private lives. A play about remembering and forgetting.

Legacy Land is the story of two sisters grappling with a painful legacy of sex abuse, incest, and family dysfunction during a freak Thanksgiving weekend blizzard. Barbara, a 42-year-old recluse, has hunkered down for an intimate weekend between her and her barely legal lover, Marcus. When Barbara’s bubbly younger sister, Denise, and her loutish fiancé, Freddie, arrive, all bets for a cozy weekend for two are off. As the blizzard renders them immobile, the group reconciles themselves to their situation. That is, until Freddie, in his bottomless arrogance, reveals the real reason for his and Denise’s visit.

PLAYWRIGHT QUOTES AND BIOS →
QUOTES FROM THE PLAYWRIGHTS ABOUT THEIR PLAYS

Andrea Stolowitz on “The Berlin Diaries”:
“This play reflects my real-life experiences in trying to understand the long-term effects of the Holocaust on my family. While The Berlin Diaries is specific to my family’s history, the intergenerational effects of historical events on individual families are universal. This is a family narrative that is occurring now across the Mediterranean and on our own US border. “

Stacey Rose on “Legacy Land”:
“Legacy Land was one of the hardest stories I’ve ever told. It’s in so many ways an exorcism of past hurts and a healing of those hurts. It’s taken me four years to get the script to where it is right now, and I’m so grateful to the Playwrights’ Center for their support. My next venture through the piece will be a deeper examination of tech elements, specifically bringing the house—the bearer of Barbara and Denise’s legacy—to life. I also look forward to diving more deeply into the relationship dynamics of the couples.”

Ariel Stess on “KARA & EMMA & BARBARA & MIRANDA”:
“Much of this play is inspired by phases of my life and women I’ve known. When I started writing, I set out to create a story told exclusively by women about their uncertainties, joys, and traumas. I’m thankful to the Playwrights’ Center for giving me this first opportunity to explore this play with collaborators and share it with audience members.”

ABOUT THE PLAYWRIGHTS’ CENTER

The Playwrights’ Center champions playwrights and new plays to build upon a living theater that demands new and innovative works.

The Center serves playwrights by sustaining careers, developing new work, and connecting playwrights to theaters. Each year at the Center, fellows and Core Writers receive more than $305,000 in direct support, 70+ new plays are workshopped, playwrights connect with 100 producing theaters through partnership programs, and 2,000 member playwrights from around the world find resources to achieve their artistic vision.

Since its founding in 1971, the Playwrights’ Center has become one of the nation’s most generous and well-respected theater organizations, helping launch the careers of numerous nationally recognized artists such as August Wilson, Lee Blessing, Suzan-Lori Parks, Jordan Harrison, Carlyle Brown, Craig Lucas, Jeffrey Hatcher, Melanie Marnich, and Kira Obolensky. Work developed through Center programs has been seen nationwide on such stages as Yale Rep, Woolly Mammoth, the Guthrie, Goodman, and many others.

Programs and services

The Core Writer program gives 25-30 of the most exciting playwrights from across the country the time and tools to develop new work for the stage. All Core Writers receive play development workshops at the Center, in collaboration with prominent directors, actors, dramaturgs, and designers. Selected work by Core Writers makes up the Center’s formal season of public readings: the PlayLabs festival and the Ruth Easton New Play Series. Core Writers are also promoted by the Center and provided opportunities through an extensive network of colleges and universities, cultural institutions, and producing theaters.

Fellowships, made possible by the McKnight and Jerome foundations, provide more than $305,000 each year for residencies, commissions, and development funds. Beyond the financial stipend, the value of fellowships is more than doubled with the year-long support the Playwrights’ Center adds through workshops with professional collaborators and through the connections the Center makes between playwrights and producers of new work. This holistic and customized combination of financial support, access to talent, and professional connections is career-changing for most playwrights. Fellowship programs: Jerome Fellows, Many Voices Fellows, McKnight Fellows in Playwriting, McKnight National Residency and Commission, McKnight Theater Artist Fellows.

Membership is open to all and provides nearly 2,000 playwrights worldwide with tools, resources, and support. Benefits include a database of playwriting opportunities, online and in-person seminars and classes, access to readings with professional actors, dramaturgical services, and more. In addition, the Playwrights’ Center’s New Plays on Campus program serves dozens of colleges and universities nationwide, providing script-matching services, arranging playwright residencies, and offering immersive apprenticeships to student playwrights.

Local and national partnerships elevate the role of living playwrights. Through the Regulars partnership program, the Playwrights’ Center partners with 100 theaters around the country to bring their artistic staff to the Center in order to spend time with playwrights and to co-develop new plays with a keen eye towards production. In fact, 60% of these plays have gone on to full production within two years (rather than the average seven-year timeframe for most plays to see production). Recent and upcoming productions resulting from Playwrights’ Center co-development workshops include “The Great Leap” by Lauren Yee at Denver Center Theatre, “Dancing on the Edge” by Adam Kraar at Theatre Novi Most, “The Gentleman Caller” by Philip Dawkins at Raven Theater, “Duat” by Daniel Alexander Jones at Soho Rep, “Early Morning Song” by Rachel Jendrzejewski at Red Eye Theater, “Fickle: A Fancy French Farce” by Meg Miroshnik at Olney Theatre Center, and “The Happiest Place on Earth” by Philip Dawkins at Greenhouse Theater Center/Sideshow Theatre Company.
